

Guide to Markups for Academic Senate

A markup document shows the edits that have been made from one version of the document to the next. Academic Senate uses markup when updating policies and the markup is what is usually discussed during Senate meetings.

This sentence is a example.

This sentence is an example of a markup.

Before each Senate meeting, you will receive an agenda and a packet of files. The packet will contain all the markups for the meeting and the agenda will contain links to each document as well.

Senate Packet

Action Items:

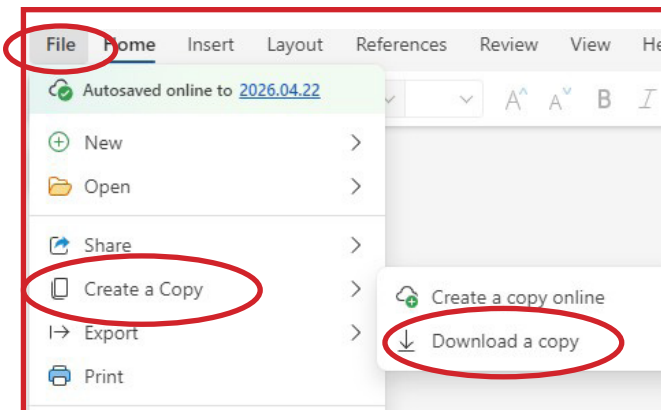

From the Academic Affairs Committee: Dimitrios Nikolaou
06.04.2024.17 - 3.3.12A - Faculty Responsibilities to Students

Link to current policy

Link to markup

Links from agenda

Clicking the link on the agenda will typically open the file in a browser window. The markup will not appear when viewing in a browser, so be sure to open the document in your desktop when using the links from the agenda. To do this, either download the file to your desktop from the File menu, or select “Open in Desktop” from the drop-down menu at the top of the page.

Download a copy

Open in Desktop